Madison, WI – Today, the Wisconsin State Senate passed new COVID-19 legislation with bipartisan support.

“When the State of Wisconsin is operating under divided government, the only way to get things accomplished is through bipartisanship,” said Senator Feyen. “I am happy this bill received overwhelming support from both sides of the aisle in the Senate today and am looking forward to seeing it passed by the Assembly and ultimately signed into law by Governor Evers.”

“Wisconsinites deserve real help and a government that can put differences aside to act. I am proud the Senate was able to do that today.”

This bill provides much needed liability protection for schools, businesses, governments, non-profits, and health care providers, which will help to kick start Wisconsin’s economic recovery. It also ensures testing and vaccinations continue to be covered by Medicaid.
