Rep. Taylor to Join Historic March for Women's Rights in Washington, DC

MADISON - Tomorrow, Rep. Chris Taylor (D-Madison) will be traveling to Washington, DC to participate in a historic march for women's rights. Rep. Taylor issued the following statement:

"I am excited to join my fellow Wisconsinites and hundreds of thousands of people from all over this country to say loudly and clearly that women's rights are human rights. In order for our nation to prosper, women must prosper. To accomplish this, state and federal policies are needed to ensure that women are paid equally for equal work, that mothers are able to care for a new baby without losing her job or being unable to make her mortgage payment, and that women are able to make their own personal, private health care decisions without politicians interfering. People will be marching tomorrow not just in Washington, DC but here in Madison and all over our country to send a strong message that issues promoting and enhance women's equality are paramount and we will not be silenced."
