Assembly Session ends with Republicans Still Ignoring Wisconsinites

Majority party can't be trusted to put the people first

MADISON – On the last night of scheduled legislative action in the State Assembly for the 2015-16 session, Rep. Chris Taylor (D-Madison) issued the following statement:

“This session ended the way it started – broken promises and wrong priorities from the GOP. On the heels of Governor Walker failing to come close to his 250,000 jobs promise, legislative Republicans continued their downward economic spiral and spent their time de-funding Planned Parenthood, cutting and gutting our public schools and changing campaign laws to pad their own campaign coffers.

“After passing three budgets and being in control of the Assembly, Senate and Governor’s office for the last six years, the GOP cannot blame anyone else but themselves for our anemic economy and stagnate wages, which the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia ranked one of the worst in the nation. Instead of investing in our children and in our people, Republicans chose to dole out billions in tax cuts for big corporations and millionaires. Because of their poor choices, Republican leaders are now already warning of another cut and gut budget coming our way.

“I’ve been asked why the State Assembly is adjourning so early compared to other sessions and with so much work left to do? The answer is simple – Republicans need as much time as possible to start working on their re-elections and explaining why they ignored the needs and priorities of the people. The people will not forget.”
