Lake Geneva, WI — Nick Polce, Republican candidate for US Congress in Wisconsin's District 1, challenges the Bryan Steil Campaign to produce donor information, including locations, for the $250,000 raised for his campaign in less than a week.

"We challenge Mr. Steil to disclose donor information to the voters of Wisconsin's 1st Congressional District," says Nick Polce. "Our Campaign is focused on working for the great Americans that live here in southeast Wisconsin, not the Political Establishment. Declaring that you raised $250,000 in less than a week, as an unknown candidate, is a typical Swamp thing that we Americans are tired of."

Polce's campaign has been centered on working for the voters and not the Political Class. The Political Class in Washington D.C. does not make decisions in the best interest of the American people.

"This is a Wisconsin 1st District Race. It is the voters of the district that should choose their Candidate, not The Establishment buying the voters a Candidate," states Polce.

Nick is a former US Army Green Beret Combat Veteran, business owner, father and husband. He feels a part of the larger freedom movement that is looking to bring the voice of the American people back to Washington D.C. Nick entered the Wisconsin District 1 race last November and since then has been actively campaigning and meeting the residents of the district.
