In The News: Gov. Walker Follows Through Once Again on Commitment to Lowering Tax Burden

[Madison, Wis.] – Scott Walker’s commitment to returning tax dollars to the hard-working taxpayers was highlighted once again this week as the governor’s $100-per-child tax rebate website went live Tuesday to an overwhelmingly positive reception.

Under Gov. Walker’s leadership, Wisconsin is working – more Wisconsinites are employed than ever before and the unemployment rate just hit a new all-time low today. The governor has always been committed to returning our better-than-expected surplus back to the taxpayers, because it’s their money, not the government’s. Tuesday’s $100-per-child tax rebate website roll out was just the latest example of how the governor’s bold reforms are working to help Wisconsin’s families win the 21st century.

Check out what’s in the news:

From Fox 11: “Governor Walker was in Northeast Wisconsin promoting his $100 child tax rebate, as the website for parents to sign up, went live. ... ‘Because of the economy, because of the reforms we’ve done in state government we had a larger than expected surplus,’ said Walker about where the rebate money came from.”

From TMJ4: “Twenty-six-year-old mom, Brittney Bloomer, has plans to make her claim soon. With a one-and-half-year-old, $100 she said, can go fast. ‘I’d use it for his savings account, or groceries diapers, wipes,’ said Bloomer. The rebate comes as a result of a state budget surplus of nearly $400 million. Gov. Scott Walker and lawmakers decided some of that will go back to Wisconsin taxpayers.”

From WBAY: “Wisconsin families are signing up for a $100-per-child tax rebate. ... Gov. Scott Walker (R-Wisconsin) stopped in Green Bay Tuesday to tout the tax credit. He says there are more than 670,000 households eligible for the rebate.”

From Fox 6: “Wisconsin taxpayers with children under age 18 are eligible for a $100-per-child tax rebate. More than 71,000 submitted claims for the rebate in the opening hours of the application period Tuesday, May 15. ‘We want to send it back to you, the hard-working citizens,’ said Gov. Scott Walker during a visit to a Shopko store in Sussex on Monday.”
