As much as the Democratic Party and the mainstream media would like to move on from the 2020 election with their usual “nothing to see here, please don’t look any further” stances, we have uncovered real problems with the 2020 election.

We are not going to look away from the two clerks in Milwaukee and Madison who turned 70,000 indefinitely confined voters into roughly 260,000 voters without an ID. We’re not going to just pretend that Mark Zuckerberg, who was busy using Facebook to silence conservative speech on the front end, was not funding “Get out the Vote” efforts in wards that vote heavily democrat on the back end. The Zuckerberg funded groups spent over 8 million dollars in the top five democrat cites in the state and the mayors of these cities were meeting in secret. We will also not overlook that the bought-and-paid-for Zuckerberg operatives took over “ballot curing” in Green Bay and maybe elsewhere, possibly affecting tens of thousands of votes. We have no idea how involved they were in the Green Bay election, and the mayor refuses to come before the committee to explain himself.

The November 2020 election had a lot of irregularities and to ignore them would not serve the people of Wisconsin.
