In The News: Walker Campaign's New Ads Highlight Governor's Record of Delivering Results for Hard-Working Wisconsin Families

[Madison, Wis.] – Scott Walker's campaign recently released two ads that spotlight the governor's record of results for hard-working families, discussing his bold efforts to stabilize health care and develop our workforce with people with disabilities.

To keep Wisconsin moving forward, Gov. Walker is working to both improve our already No. 1 ranked health care system and assist students with disabilities, through Project SEARCH, in developing skills as they transition into the workforce. With Washington failing to get the job done in repealing Obamacare, Gov. Walker stepped up to the plate with a plan to invest $200 million in market-based solutions to bring costs down for hard-working families. On top of that, under Gov. Walker's leadership, Project SEARCH has seen significant growth throughout our state – with Wisconsin now known as a national leader in hiring disabled workers. Scott Walker is fighting for families across our state and getting results along the way – his bold reforms to strengthen our workforce and stabilize health care will help Wisconsin win the 21st century.

Check out what's in the news:

From WSAW: "Project SEARCH helps people with developmental disabilities find jobs in their communities through a year of hands-on training. Now, one of its Wisconsin Rapids graduates is being highlighted in Governor Scott Walker's re-election campaign advertisement."

From Real Clear Politics: "In a new television ad ... the Republican governor touts a $200 million investment he signed into law in February aimed at lowering premiums in the state 'because we can't wait for Washington to get the job done.' The ad also features a physician lamenting rising health care costs under the Affordable Care Act and arguing that 'Washington politicians keep promising to fix the problem, but it never happens.'"

From TMJ4: "Governor Scott Walker goes after 'Washington politicians' in a new campaign ad as he seeks re-election for a third term. The TV ad features a doctor blaming the Affordable Care Act - better known as Obamacare, for rising health insurance premiums: 'Washington politicians keep promising to fix the problem, but it never happens,' the ad says."

From the Associated Press: "The new Walker spot focuses on his $200 million reinsurance plan that won bipartisan support in the Legislature earlier this year. Once approved by the federal government, it's expected to lower insurance premiums starting in 2019 and attract more providers to the state."
