ICYMI: Scott Walker Helping to Keep All Corners of Wisconsin Working for Generations to Come

[Madison, Wis.] – Scott Walker stopped in Eau Claire Wednesday to highlight his support of small businesses and expanded broadband access, just a few of the many ways he is fighting for rural communities in all corners of Wisconsin.

In the governor's most recent budget, we made a significant investment of $35.5 million into broadband access, and this is yet another example of its positive impact. Expanded broadband access benefits both people across the state and Wisconsin job creators – with more of the governor's bold reform, we can keep Wisconsin working for generations to come.

Gov. Scott Walker stopped in the Chippewa Valley to celebrate the continuing growth of broadband access Wednesday.

The telecommunications and IT-solutions company 'WIN', opened their doors to the community Wednesday morning. It was a celebration, moving their headquarters into the former Globe University building on the southeast side of Eau Claire.

The company has grown from one employee to more than 120 working in the Chippewa Valley. Gov. Walker says this is a great example of how to keep workers here in our region, and in the state.

"It's important for business, quality of life, for health care even for tourists. This is just one more compelling reason to live, work, play, retire right here in the state of Wisconsin," said Walker. ...
