ICYMI: On Upfront with Mike Gousha, Scott Walker Calls Out Tony Evers' "Everything is on the Table" Plan to Raise Taxes

Walker vows to finish the job of completing Wisconsin's comeback in third and final term

[Madison, Wis.] – Scott Walker joined Mike Gousha Sunday on Upfront to talk about how Tony Evers' plans to raise property, income, and gas taxes on hard-working families in Wisconsin would take us backward, and how the governor is committed to getting the job done of completing Wisconsin's comeback in his third and final term.

Scott Walker is moving Wisconsin forward and his leadership on the issue of tax relief is in stark contrast to the failed leadership of Tony Evers, who is making empty promises and has plans to increase property taxes, income taxes, and gas taxes.

The fact is if everything is on the table, that includes a dollar a gallon gas tax increase.

If everything isn't on the table, then I think the media should ask him [Evers]: What is it?

What he [Evers] has said thus far is: I'll tell you after the election, I'll present a plan at the inauguration.

I think any voter out there listening, no matter whether you're a Democrat, a Republican, or somewhere in between should be very cautious about that.

Because what that means is gas taxes, property taxes, income taxes, are going to go up – that'll cost us jobs.

And that'll take us back to where things were I think when I was worried and a lot of other parents were worried.
