In The News: Scott Walker Barnstorms the State in Multi-Day Swing Across Western, Northern, and Central Wisconsin

[Madison, Wis.] – Scott Walker met with hard-working families in communities across the state over the weekend to talk about our record of reform that sparked Wisconsin’s comeback, and our agenda to keep Wisconsin working for generations to come.

Wisconsin’s comeback is strong under Scott Walker’s leadership. With seven consecutive months of the unemployment rate at or below 3 percent and after we’ve put more people to work this year in our state than ever before, Scott Walker is moving Wisconsin forward.

Check out what’s in the news:

From WQOW TV News 18: “Governor Scott Walker was back in Eau Claire Saturday, his second visit this week as his campaign for re-election enters its final weeks.”

From the Ashland Daily Press: “Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker said Sunday that Wisconsin has moved beyond simply seeking more jobs and that the emphasis is now on workforce development to insure that the state has adequate workers to fill the job vacancies it already has and those that will develop in the future.”

From Fox 21 News: ““You want a governor who’s not afraid to get out of the office and come up and see you. [Scott Walker said] We’ve done that over and over again, it’s part of the reason we’ve made the kinds of changes we have in terms of massive new investments in rural schools, in terms of massive new investments in broadband access grants. Things like that come from being in this part of the state and really listening to the people of Northwestern Wisconsin.””

From the Hub City Times: “Over 200 people gathered at the Marshfield Mall to show support for Governor Walker in his race for his third term. Walker said that a third term surprises him considering he had aspirations to go into business at the age of 18.”
