Election results provide opportunity to fully protect preborn

Dan Miller, Pro-Life Wisconsin state director, offered the following comments on yesterday's national and state election results:

Pro-Life Wisconsin is heartened by yesterday's federal and state elections results giving the American people a pro-life presidential administration and pro-life majorities in the U.S. House and Senate. Additionally, Wisconsinites have expanded pro-life majorities in the state Assembly and Senate.

As President-elect Donald Trump humbly explained in his acceptance speech early this morning, to make this election truly historic our public leaders must get to work and get the job done. For Pro-Life Wisconsin that means finally protecting preborn children as legal "persons" with full constitutional protections from conception, something that Congress and the state legislatures have the legal authority, and duty, to accomplish.

We are proud of our endorsed state candidates, 21 of 24 who were victorious. We are especially proud of Dan Kapanke of La Crosse who ran a hard fought state senate race so close it is likely to be recounted. We congratulate Congressman-elect Mike Gallagher and incumbent Congressman Glenn Grothman who won commanding victories.

With power comes responsibility, and Pro-Life Wisconsin is committed to helping our elected officials do their utmost to fully protect those most in need – our vulnerable preborn brothers and sisters and our frail elderly parents and grandparents.

May God bless America and the great state of Wisconsin!
