

Cleats for a Cause: Packers Center Corey Linsley Supports Wisconsin CASA

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

November 28, 2018

(Green Bay, WI) Tuesday, November 27th is known as Giving Tuesday. For a number of NFL players across the country, it was special for another reason. More than 800 NFL players showcased causes that are important to them with the unveiling of custom cleats as part of the NFL's My Cause My Cleats campaign.

For Packers Center Corey Linsley, the cause is Wisconsin CASA. CASA stands for Court Appointed Special Advocates, specially trained volunteers who are a voice for children who find themselves in the court or child welfare system through no fault of their own. Wisconsin CASA works to protect children by giving them a voice and a hopeful future.

“Corey and his wife, Anna, have been spokespersons for Wisconsin CASA for the past two years, in addition to being trained CASA advocates who have been paired with children they advocate for,” explained Wisconsin CASA Executive Director Sue Schwartz. “We are thrilled Corey decided to raise awareness of CASA through the NFL’s “My Cause My Cleats.”

Players will wear their custom-designed shoes during games in December. Afterward, the shoes will be auctioned off, with proceeds going to Wisconsin CASA, through the NFL’s website: www.nfl.com/auction

“We hope people will follow Corey’s and the Packers social media postings about My Cause – My Cleats,” added Schwartz. “It’s fun and it will help spread the word about CASA.”
