

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: April 20, 2020

CONTACTS:

WCASA: Ian Henderson, Director of Legal and System Services

ianh@wcasa.org, 608.257.1516

End Domestic Abuse WI: Jenna Gormal, Director of Public Policy and Systems Change

jennag@endabusewi.org, 608.237.3985

WCASA AND END DOMESTIC ABUSE WI TELL SURVIVORS OF VIOLENCE: YOU ARE NOT ALONE AND SERVICES REMAIN OPEN

MADISON, WI - During this unprecedented time, the Wisconsin Coalition Against Sexual Assault (WCASA) and End Domestic Abuse Wisconsin (End Abuse) want survivors to know that sexual assault and domestic abuse service providers in the state remain open. We understand that the heightened stress and anxiety associated with the COVID-19 pandemic, along with the isolation that may accompany social distancing, can be triggering and potentially dangerous for survivors. While many of us are staying at home and working remotely to protect ourselves and others during this health crisis, for many survivors, home is not a safe place. Children face an increased risk for sexual abuse during this time, and the Rape, Abuse, and Incest National Network (RAINN) has noted increased rates of minors reporting sexual abuse since the shelter-in-place orders went into effect across the country. Domestic violence cases have also spiked worldwide, with survivors who already have violent partners now being confined at home with them, and further isolated from support systems.

"The virus can lead to folks being trapped in abusive relationships, not because of the virus itself, but because of its economic impacts. We know that when survivors lack resources, it becomes much more difficult to leave the relationship," says Grisel Santiago-Rivera, Executive Director of End Domestic Abuse Wisconsin.

"We want survivors to know that they are not alone, and advocates at sexual assault and domestic abuse programs are available to provide emotional support and information no matter how long ago the abuse occurred," stated Pennie Meyers, Executive Director of WCASA.

The timing of this pandemic has also coincided with Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM), which occurs every year during April. Traditionally, SAAM is a time where local service providers engage in a variety of awareness-raising activities around sexual violence-related issues. SAAM is also a time where local programs will showcase how they provide critical support and resources for survivors and their families. While many of the in-person activities have been cancelled due to COVID-19, programs are finding unique ways to promote SAAM and support survivors using social media and other virtual events.

Finally, it is critical to note that sexual violence and domestic abuse do not occur in a vacuum. In fact, our organizations believe that to end sexual violence and domestic abuse, we must end all forms of oppression. The racist and xenophobic attacks on people of Asian descent that have been occurring across the country, including Wisconsin, in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic are deeply unacceptable. It is disturbing, but sadly not surprising, to learn of the disparate impacts the COVID-19 pandemic is having on communities of color. As a result, we will continue to stand in solidarity with our allies working on issues of racial justice and will challenge the systems of oppression that negatively impact historically marginalized communities.

If you have any questions or concerns please reach out to Ian Henderson for WCASA, or Jenna Gormal at End Abuse WI.

---