Todd Novak: Follower of Donald J. Trump?

MADISON – Has Todd Novak, who has been silent to date about his support for his party's fear-mongering presidential candidate, signaled that he's a follower of Donald J. Trump? Novak, who has avoided making his positions clear to his district over the last two years, has offered little information publicly about his stance on the presidential race.

"The voters of the 51st Assembly District deserve to know whether or not Todd Novak supports extreme presidential candidate Donald Trump," Assembly Democratic Campaign Committee executive director George Aldrich said. "Does Todd Novak agree with all of Trump's anti-woman, anti-middle class and anti-military family positions? Is he going to endorse his party's presidential candidate? Or is Novak just going to keep stringing along voters with his unclear positions?"

There is little doubt that Donald Trump's attacks – on a Gold Star family, a journalist with a disability, NATO allies, and so many others – are out of line with Wisconsin values. Trump has shown that he does not have the temperament to lead our country.

Todd Novak recently followed Trump's presidential account on Twitter, which is the only indication to date of his preference in this historic presidential contest.

"Voters shouldn't have to read tea leaves or read between the lines on Twitter to determine if their elected representative will stand with their district or Donald Trump," Aldrich added. "Novak should make his position on Trump clear – and soon."
